Feng Shui is the ancient knowledge about how the environment affects humans within a space, in particular, our living and workspace.

Feng Shui is not a religion and is not based on a belief system. It does not require us to worship any deities or objects, and does not require belief for it to manifest. Benefits from Feng Shui do not impact on one's value system. Feng Shui effects have to do with the energy of the environment and how it plays out external and internal to our living and workspace. This energy we refer to in Feng Shui is called Qi.

Qi is the vital breath or energy animating the cosmos, a pervasive force of the Universe.

There are different ways to view and understand Feng Shui:

1. The MACRO (external environment) and the MICRO (internal environment) perspective.
The MACRO-environment refers to the lay of the land, for example, the surrounding natural features and man made structures.
The MICRO-environment refers to the orientation of the main entrance of the building or a property development, the layout of the internal space and way the internal space is utilized.
2. The Visible and Non-visible aspects
Feng Shui can be viewed as a systematic knowledge for identifying Qi. The 'visible' aspects of Qi is indirectly obvious and somewhat corresponds to common sense.
The non-visible aspect of Feng Shui is not discernable without trained knowledge of this original ancient wisdom, which is presented as prescribed formations of geographical features and sophisticated calculation-based formulae for determining where Qi resides in a given space.
3. Space and Time considerations
Feng Shui masters deal with Qi in a specific three-dimensional space, in fact any site or place where people gather, work or live. So the positioning of the site and/or aligning within the space are fundamental to determining how the energy will manifest. Crucial to this is the consideration of timing aspects, as no Feng Shui is forever auspicious or inauspicious.

The original wisdom knowledge of Feng Shui can be traced as far back as 5000 years ago when cosmological symbols, codes and systems such as the BaGua Trigram were first developed, and subsequently, the Calendar System, Compass and Numerical systems, as a means to understand Heaven and Earth for the betterment of an agrarian society. As with any sacred wisdom associated with ancient Chinese traditions, Feng Shui knowledge was a closely guarded secret, passed down only through wisdom lineages of master - disciple / father - son. Through these lineages evolved the many schools and systems of Classical Feng Shui. In ancient times, Feng Shui was used to select favorable sites as a primary means to enrich the well-being of large communities, starting at the highest influence levels with locating spiritual centres, seats of governance, palaces and administrative centres, followed by its use on individuals such as on the homes of nobility. Now as Feng Shui is regaining its popularity, we tend to see it being used primarily at the level of the individual for residential and commercial purposes.

The true benefits of Feng Shui come about when an accomplished Master practitioner is able to determine the optimum solution for wealth, health and harmonious living for their clients through well thought out positioning and alignment of a site or property.

In this presentation, Master Boon will elaborate on the original wisdom Feng Shui as practiced by the master lineages, showing visual examples of case studies. Subsequently, she will be giving a Certified Training Course in Boulder. Through transmission of these teachings by a qualified master along with proper understanding and practice by anyone, tremendous benefits are assured. When used side by side with architectural design, civic planning, interior and landscape design, Feng Shui can once again regain its place as a powerful means to ensure the well-being and good fortune to society at large.

MASTER BOON YAP

Boon Yap, Feng Shui Master and director of Feng Shui for Enriching Lives, teaches Feng Shui and consults worldwide. She has been immersed in Feng Shui all her life, as her father is the well-respected scholar, teacher and practitioner of Feng Shui, Grandmaster Yap Cheng Hai.

Boon grew up in Petaling Jaya, Malaysia, and lived an enriching childhood exposed to all the ancient Chinese philosophical wisdom that was part and parcel of growing up in the Yap family.

Boon is trained in her father's unique approach to the various schools of Feng Shui. Grandmaster Yap was the first in the world to amalgamate all the major systems, distilling out the essence of the knowledge from the major philosophies to find the ultimate solution for each situation. In the ensuing years, she has honed this complex holistic practice to provide the optimum and most powerful outcomes for her clients.

Her scientific career included time as an R&D scientist with the multinational biopharmaceutical corporation, CSL Limited, where she wrote international papers and standards for the blood products industry. Since 1998 she has run her own successful biomedical consultancy, APac BioMed Solutions.

Boon is headquartered in Melbourne, Australia, but spends much of her time in other parts of the Asia Pacific region.

Feng Shui for Enriching Lives is an international consultancy that provides Feng Shui solutions for commercial and residential properties.
